SECTION 2 TIER II FACILITIES

2.1 2011 TIER II FACILITIES

Anderson County has a strong, pro-active Local Emergency Planning Committee. Working in conjunction with Emergency Management, this organization actively solicits membership and tracks TIER II reporting requirements. Each facility that stores or uses hazardous materials above a threshold amount must file an annual report. This report identifies the hazardous materials, quantities of each, and location on site.

For security purposes the detailed TIER II facilities are documented only in this Supporting Annex. A risk and vulnerability assessment on identified TIER II facilities in Anderson County was conducted using the criteria below.

SECTION 3

TERRORISM TARGET FACILITIES

3.1 2011 TERRORISM TARGET FACILITIES

Anderson County prepared a Department of Homeland Security sponsored terrorism assessment in 2002 to identify potentially at-risk critical facilities, drawing on the county's Emergency Operations Plan. The assessment considered terrorism as a primary mode of a possible disaster: contamination (chemical, biological, radiological, or nuclear), energy (explosive, arson) or failure/denial of services (sabotage, infrastructure breakdown, and disruption). It considered eight critical infrastructure categories: telecommunications, electrical power systems, gas and oil facilities, financial institutions, transportation networks, water supply systems, government services, and emergency services. Finally, it considered the vulnerability of the county's assets, assessing each identified facility in terms of both its current level of protection from an attack, and its "attractiveness" (i.e., highly visible or draws large crowds). It should be noted that intentional human-caused disasters cannot be quantified with as great a degree of accuracy as natural disasters.

Building on the Office of Domestic Preparedness Terrorist Vulnerability Assessment of 2002, a terrorism vulnerability assessment of each identified target was conducted using the criteria in the table below. For security purposes, the detailed information on identified targets is documented in the Supporting Annex.
